

Report from Work Shop C

Meetings with parents and teachers of students having epilepsy were deemed very necessary. Having a peer preparation session is also helpful. At school level, people who can manage seizures should be identified in case of such incidences.

Fifth formers should also be guided as to what kind of careers they should pursue keeping in mind that certain jobs could pose risks.

On Campus KSU and PULSE or any other entity should also be informed in order to be of help to PWE.

Knowledge and information should be passed on to Trade Unions and also employer's associations so as to make them more aware of what this condition is all about and how it might effect the particular individuals.

On the other hand first aid courses should be given. The use of gadgets such as the SOS bracelet and special I.D. Cards should also be encouraged.

It was concluded that social networking such as face book and twitter were a cheap and effective way to disseminate information to the general public. All these factors would help to reduce stigma in employment.
